- (viii) Linguistic determinism (5 marks)

(C) Discuss the relationship between language, mind and reality. (10 marks)

QUESTION TWO

In his article: “Theories of meaning” Jeff Speaks elaborates various facets of meaning. With specific reference to this article:

- (a) Briefly explain the problem of “meaning” (3 marks)
- (b) Distinguish between what Speaks terms as the “semantic theories of meaning” and “foundational theories of meaning”. Clarify each with your own example, not the one Speaks uses. (6 marks)
- (c) Explain any one semantic theories of meaning and any one foundational theory of meaning that Speaks discusses. (6 marks)

QUESTION THREE

- (a) How does language use (or abuse) enhance communication? (3 marks)
- (b) Explain the role of social context in communication, and give a clear example. (3 marks)
- (c) Using a clear example in each case, explain any three specific illocutionary speech acts, in the view of John Searle’s (1975) classification. (9 marks)

QUESTION FOUR

Choose either A or B, NOT both.

A. Some linguistic philosophers have argued that language encompasses a people’s socio-cultural worldview. Do you agree with them? Critique their view with specific reference to any two indigenous languages compared with each other against worldviews of their speakers. (15 marks)

OR

B. With specific reference to the Sapir-Whorf Hypothesis, discuss the implications of linguistic relativity in a nation that has ethno-linguistic diversity. (15 marks)

QUESTION FIVE

In the recent past, African nations have experienced a prevalent use of native languages and also mushrooming of many vernacular radio and television stations. While some people view this as an aspect of development, some critics have blamed the prevalent use of native languages for retardation of development in most African countries. To what extent does development depend on language? Defend your position citing clear examples from specific indigenous African languages. (15 marks)
